

ETHICS

Cultivating a Culture of Dignity, Trust and Justice

March 25, 2019
Marriott Courtyard Downtown Toronto

Whenever and wherever we are dealing with human dignity and human well-being, theologian John Glaser reminds us, we are dealing with ethics. "There are," he says, virtually no ethics free zones...." Hence, the everyday activities of health care delivery are profoundly ethical—caring for patients, staff interactions, working with employees, budgeting, strategic planning, business development, entering into partnerships, vendor and community relations, health policy, and the like.*

The 2019 CHSO Forum will provide an opportunity to explore ethics as an element central to the identity of Catholic health care, hear examples about how the ethics service supports decision making, and learn about some gaps in ethics use and capacity from a recently completed cross-country review.
